

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The projects in this book were designed and constructed with the inspiration, help and collaboration of several people. I would like to thank the most important among them.

Two mentors have influenced me a great deal in executing this work. Rafael Moneo, who invited me to teach at the Graduate School of Design at Harvard in 1990, and is an architect and a human being I admire, like, and respect immensely. An intellectual as well as an artist, the energy, rigor, integrity, and dignity Rafael brings to everything he does, has been an inspiration. The wonderful Dan Kiley—with whom I had the privilege to collaborate for more than a decade before his death—opened my eyes to ways of looking at and thinking about buildings, sites, and landscapes. He was a delightful presence and influence in my working process.

In the office over the years, several key collaborators made it possible for the houses to be successfully developed, drawn, and built. James Dallmann and Jeff King were instrumental in the realization of the Vermont and Connecticut houses respectively. Tom Perkins, Jeremy Ficca, and Erkin Ozay played important roles on the first Martha's Vineyard house. Erkin Ozay and Matthew Snyder are in the process of bringing East House to completion. Paul Puciata deserves special mention for expertly and tirelessly running the extraordinarily complex Manhattan Townhouse project. I would like to express my specific gratitude to Matthew Snyder, who in addition to running projects over the last five years, has been an immense help to me and played a critical role in all aspects of the office, including the realization of this book.

Two brilliant collaborators outside the office deserve special thanks as well. My good friend Matthias Schuler, with whom I have worked on many projects over the last several years, has gradually helped me understand that making sustainable buildings is not only a moral responsibility, but that far better and interesting buildings are the result. Michael Van Valkenburgh—artist, thinker and worthy successor to the great Dan Kiley—has been exceptional to work with, particularly on East House, for which his insights have been exceptional.

It was William Morgan who suggested it was time to put these houses into a book, and his ability to provide a greater context to the work has been invaluable.

Lastly, I would like to thank Eve Blau, a wonderful architectural thinker, writer, and also my wife, who has helped me in incalculable ways. —Peter Rose

OFFICE CREDITS

The coordination and follow through required to develop and represent these projects has rested, over the years, on the shoulders of an extremely capable office staff of architects and designers. Additionally, in this academic design environment, a cast of interns has been a constant source of talent and inspiration. Credit is due to the following architects, designers, and interns for their part in making possible the work shown here.

In chronological order
James Dallman, John McLaughlin, Paul Puciata, Jeff King, Martha Cassel, Kyle Larabee, Tom Perkins, Jennifer Minetree, Tamara Metz, William Bryant, Jay Valenta, Wendy Shlensky, Zeke Brown, Thomas Robinson, Beth Stadnicki, Wynne Mun, Lan Ying Ip, Michele Adrian, Yasmin Kuhn, Jeremy Ficca, Jane Ahn, Lola Sheppard, Adam Semel, Mark McGlothlin, Alastair Townsend, Mette Aamodt, David Choi, Ying Zhou, Karl Munkelwitz, Andrew Plumb, Abby Klima, Matthew Snyder, Elizabeth Richey, Duong Bui, Brian Baldor, Becky Hutchinson, Ramona Albert, Erkin Ozay, Jonathan Chace, Katherine Feather, Van Wilkes Fowlkes, Laura Crescimano, Louis Kraft, Shu Lai, and Grace Escano.

